

Backwashing Sediment Filter

Troublesome bits of grit plugging the screens in the faucet. Settling in the tub. Accumulating in the toilet tank. Blocking the hoses to the washing machine and dishwasher.

A simple controller lets the homeowner set the system and forget it.

These little particles are more than an eyesore. They are heavy sediment coming from the well into your home's water system. Unchecked, sediment damages plumbing, causes leaks, and compromises the effectiveness of expensive appliances.

If you see small black particles in your sinks, tub, or faucet, heavy sediment from the well may be the problem.

If heavy sediment is a problem in your home, the solution is a backwashing sediment filter from Contoocook Artesian Well. Our system is maintenance free. There are no filters to change or chemicals to add. Simply set it and forget it.

Slim, tall tanks are tucked neatly next to the water tank in the basement.

How it works

A tall tank of granular media is set next to the pressure tank in the basement. As water from the well flows through the media, heavy sediment is trapped. The system is set to automatically backwash the sediment from the tank – it's that simple.

Well water flows through media that traps heavy sediment before it reaches the faucet.

How our system compares

The water from every well is unique. Some filtration companies install a "one size fits all" system that may not address the issues specific to your water. Our filtration professionals carefully choose the best media to filter out the sediment in your water. Each and every system is custom built to suit the unique requirements of your home.

What our customers are saying...

"...very knowledgeable and easy to work with. It was a pleasure dealing with you after dealing with the others."
